Jewell Grigsby-Martin: February Fitness Challenge Champion

By Lois Allan

The February Fitness Challenge motivates a lot of people, and none more than seventy year old Jewell Grigsby-Martin of the Virginia Masters Swim Club. This year more than 400 people turned in records of their yardage for the month, and no one else outswam Jewell's 526,500 yards. Just so you know, that breaks down to swimming 18,803 yards per day for each and every one of the 28 days and 2,350 yards per hour with no allowance for slowing down or pausing to rest. This impressive record inspired your Barracuda Newsletter scribe to call Jewell to find out how she did it.

In 1993 Jewell's club decided to participate as a team. This was her first time to sign up, and when the results were published, she was disappointed to learn that she placed thirteenth. Certain that she could do better than that, the following year she trained and got sixth place, and that wasn't good enough, either. She then decided, as she said "to go all out," and the next year she placed first for women in her age group. Even that wasn't enough to satisfy her competitive spirit. In 1998 and 1999 she was first overall, men and women, all age groups. Then, in 2000, "some man put in over 700,000 yards." Either he tired himself out or he isn't as determined as Jewell, because in 2001 she regained her top rank. And now she's done it again--and plans to repeat or better her yardage next year.

How does she do it? She swims in three daily sessions: two and a half hours in the morning, after which she goes home, goes to bed and has something to eat, often in bed. In the afternoon she repeats the routine, then in the evening attends her club's workout for a final two and a half to three hour session. She says she can easily do 3,000 yards per hour, which gives her time for a bathroom break occasionally. Her coach, Harry deLong, in a phone conversation, laughed and said, "She's for real. In fact, she's amazing; even though she seems to be in the water all day, she doesn't get tired. She often finishes a session by doing 50 or 100 yards of butterfly."

Obviously, she does very little else during February, but that doesn't mean she isn't just as amazingly active the other eleven months.. She became a retiree four years ago, which gave her the time for volunteer work in her church, plus weight training, step aerobics, and Tae Bo, not to mention swimming. In addition to her career as an administrative coordinator to the Assistant Postmaster General, Delivery Services Dept., Headquarters, U.S. Postal Service, she brought up a family of eight children, now all grown and producing her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Visiting all of them is another high priority activity.

Jewell says she has no trouble counting laps because she has a system of counting in increments. The first is her warm-up of 4000 yards; she also varies her stroke, which helps in keeping track. Freestyle and backstroke are mainstays, as she doesn't like breast stroke--hurts her knees, she says. Harry deLong says she can often be seen and heard as she plows back and forth in backstroke singing at the top of her lungs. Now that the February Fitness Challenge is done, he wants her to work on stroke technique and enter a meet now and then. It's a sure thing, though, that she won't be forgoing preparation for next year's Challenge.
